Lesson 1

Crossing the Bridge between Languages

1 The first English teacher in Japan
2 "I'm not here to fight with you."
3 MacDonald and Tajiro
4 "Sayonara"

Mr. John Baker is an ALT from Oregon. He is having his first lesson in Ms. Sakai's class. For the lesson, he is going to introduce the first English teacher in Japan.

1 The first English teacher in Japan

Sakai: Class, welcome to our lesson. Today, we have a new teacher, John. John is from Oregon in the US. He has a very interesting story to tell you. It's about the first English teacher in Japan. He was also from the same state.

John: Yes, the connection between Oregon and Japan goes back many years. In fact, it goes back to a young American. He came to a small island in the north of Japan in 1848. His name was Ranald MacDonald.

Sakai: Why did he come to Japan?

John: Well, he was the son of a Native American princess and an American trader. He believed that Native Americans might be related to Japanese.

Sakai: Really? Do you have a picture of him?

John: Yes, in fact I would like to show it in my presentation.
